

“Before the symposium, I thought I knew everything about my diagnosis. Boy, was I wrong. I have pages and pages of notes containing new information about my illness.”

—Anonymous, 2023 Symposium Attendee

The 2026 International Vasculitis Symposium is designed to educate and empower people living with all forms of vasculitis and those who care for them. Because vasculitis is a family of rare diseases, many patients rarely have the opportunity to meet others with the same condition in-person. By bringing our community together, we create a space to learn directly from vasculitis experts, share experiences, ask questions, and gain insights that strengthen knowledge, confidence, and connection.

The Symposium brings together hundreds of people impacted by vasculitis to explore:

- Medical Updates: Learn about the latest advances in vasculitis research, treatment options, and wellness from leading experts.
- Community Connection: Meet others with the same disease type, by geographic region, and through sessions tailored for patients, caregivers, or both.
- Youth Networking: Create space for children and young adults to connect and discuss topics specific to their age and experiences.
- Research Engagement: Learn about clinical trials and how patient participation through the Vasculitis Patient-Powered Research Network helps drive discovery.
- Living Well With Vasculitis: Explore strategies and complementary approaches that support daily life and overall well-being.

Why It Matters

People living with vasculitis have long been an underserved community. As scientific discoveries and new treatments bring renewed hope, it's more important than ever to ensure patients and caregivers have access to the knowledge they need to understand their options, make informed decisions, and advocate confidently for their care.

How We Measure Success

We ask attendees to complete two surveys—one before the Symposium and one after—to help us assess learning outcomes, satisfaction, and overall experience. Feedback from these surveys directly informs how we shape future Symposia, ensuring each event reflects the evolving needs of the vasculitis community.

Beyond the event itself, we extend the reach of Symposium insights through our active social media presence, amplifying expert perspectives from both medical and patient voices.
